There are five degrees of punishment which the Regimental Party Bureau may recommend to the Farty Commission for infraction of Communist Party rules and regulations.

- (a) Off the record verbal Party reprimand, a warning, that another infraction of Communist Party rules will lead to severe disciplinary action.
- (b) A Party reprimaná entered into the record.
- (c) A severe Party reprimend entered into the record.
- (d) A severe Party reprimand entered on the records with a warning of expulsion from the Party.
- (e) A recommendation of expulsion from the Party.

The Division Party Commission may hand down a decision following the recommendations of the regimental Party Bureau except for expulsion from the Party. In the case expulsion from the Party is recommended the Division Party Commission is required to forward the recommendations to the Military District Political Directorate who makes the final decision. If the guilty party has been a Party member of long standing and holds a relatively high position the Central Committee of the Communist Party usually assumes the responsibility for the case.

Political officers do not have any special Party disciplinary power beyond the authority conveyed upon them by their military rank. They may and are encouraged to act as informers and to recommend to the Regimental Party Bureau a course of action.

Ninety-five percent of Soviet Army officers are Party members and consequently subject to Party discipline. In the case of EM and NCOs only one fifth are Party members. The remainder of EM and NCOs fall outside Party disciplinary control. However, 25-30% of EM and NCOs are Komsomol members and, therefore, come under the disciplinary powers of that organization which parallel the system of the Communist Party.

The MGB has limitless powers for disciplining Party as well as non-Party personnel of the Soviet Army. A special counter intelligence section consisting of 30 officers and EM at Division level has the power to arrest and deport all violators. At regimental level one to two special MGB Investigators maintain a special MGB section which gathers information from a network of informers among Soviet Army personnel. The Regimental Party Bureau and all political officers are required to report all anti-Party activity to the regimental MGB section. The MGB has free excess to all material gathered by the Regimental Party Bureau, the Division Party Commission and political officers.
